So, the National has not only a 2-club race but actually a 5-team battle, for who can count the Cards and Phils out right now?

The American Association has three teams closely bunched and two others close up. In fact, only Louisville is completely out of it. That's the weak spot in the chain.

Indianapolis has a great background in baseball. It won the

In all the American Association has won 24 and lost 13 to the international champions in the games since 1909. Last year Indianapolis won four straight from Rochester. Only one game was played in Indianapolis, again illustrating honesty of the game.

Of course some of the Junior World Series victories were won by cities no longer in the circuit, the history, listing the Indians program listing such as Kansas City, Milwaukee, Toledo and Columbus, all of which are now out of the league, two in the majors, one (Columbus) in the International.

After looking at a Milwaukee-Cardinal game on the screens, Gus Fann might be excused if he pined a bit for the days of pitching.

One of the screwiest of the cheating pitches was told of by Norm Bepley, the announcer at the Indians' park. He was telling about a pitcher named Davis, with the Negro clowns, then in the National Negro league before the raids of the majors put the league on the ropes.

Someone mentioned another pitcher who hurled with Indianapolis and didn't seem to have so much stuff, yet he would fan 12 to 14 men.

Cohen Recalls Danforth's Style
Andy Cohen recalled Dave Danforth, who went up to the major from Tulsa, and pitched mostly for the old St. Louis Browns.
