

Boots and Bingles

Wichita's hopes for an all-star game here July 16 may rest with the result of the Battle of the Twin Cities. St. Paul and Minneapolis clash four times, while Wichita is in Indianapolis for four. If the Twin City rivals split, all should be well; if St. Paul sweeps the series, Wichita might lose the plum for Andy Cohen left town plenty disgusted with losing three toughies, one by a rain storm and seeks REVENGE. Advices from Minneapolis say that there is even more than the usual St. Paul-Minneapolis neighboring feud this year, for Red Davis at a spring baseball rally, openly took a crack at Max Macon, the Saints manager. Red said Max bawled him out at Columbus in 1938 for losing Macon a game, when Red made an error at third, Max being the pitcher. Macon claimed he didn't recall it. But Red's remarks set off another family feud, or at least it did in the papers, which encourages the fans to keep it up. — Lynn Stone, general manager of the local Braves, doesn't fear the game being a flop here, although admitting Wichita must buck tremendous turnouts of past games, such as 19,000 at Denver last year and two or three up around 12,000. "I have a hunch we will do all right, if we stay up there which I think we can, despite the crippled condition of the club," Lynn said last night. — Wichita will recall Jimmy Conzelman, who as coach at Washington U. of St. Louis and later a pro football coach at Chicago, often visited Wichita, making several football talks here. He was a whale of a speaker. Well, the white-haired Jimmy is now an actor. He plays the role of the Yankee manager in "Damn Yankee," the colorful musical which was a hit on Broadway for two years and is now on the summer starlight theater circuit. Conzelman got some very fine notices for his stage work at St. Louis last week. Wichitaans visiting there shouldn't miss the show.
