

Bears Push Over Markers In 8th Inning Explosion

Denver come up with the big blow in the eighth Saturday night and wrecked a game for young Vic Rhem. The Bears won it, 2 to 1, and evened up the series at a game each in the Stadium.

The series closes with a double header Sunday, the first starting at 5:30 in a two-night affair.

The Denver climatic blow was delivered by an ex-Wichita Indian, Jim Pisoni, with a Wichita product and native . . . Dick Sanders . . . on base.

Up until that moment, which came with Rhem only four outs away from victory, Wichita led 1 to 0 on a tally which the Braves had managed in the sixth.

Two Out Homer

Two were away in the top of the fatal eighth frame and none on base and the situation looked pretty favorable. But Sanders stroked a clean hit to left and rambled to second with a double as Bob Talbot skidded on the wet grass, the ball eluding him.

That brought up Pisoni, who played here in 1953 and since had reached the majors, with Kansas City.

Pisoni had been something of a nuisance anyway, with a triple and a single. This time he caught one on the right spot of his big ash and the ball went long, and far, over the left field wall, and the game was gone.

The pitching battle was won by John Gabler, a hard throwing righthander, who was originally signed up at Belleville, by Ralph Houk.

Gabler held Wichita to four hits, all singles, and thus the Braves hardly deserved to win. However, bad base running cost a chance, in late frames.

The game was interrupted for a half hour in the fourth by a heavy shower. The damp air and a cross breeze hampered the hitters and favored the pitchers. But Pisoni had enough wood on his drive to overcome the weather.

How Braves Scored

The lone Wichita tally came in after the first Wichita hit. For five innings, Gabler did not allow a safe hit. Talbot led off in the sixth with a hit he beat out, Cort Roberts getting the ball back of first bit missing the fleet runner. Joe Morgan flied, Earl Hersh drew a walk and Ray Shearer flied out to left for the second out.

Then Eddie Charles drove a skimmer past the box, the ball hit the second base bag and caromed off, allowing a safe hit and Talbot to score. Hersh was nailed trying for third, which may have been costly as Joe Koppe singled to start the next frame.

Koppe Leads Off

In the seventh Koppe started it with his single. He was out trying to steal. Ray Holton fanned but Rhem was given free transportation, on a hit batsman ticket, when an inside pitch struck his right hand. Al Spangler singled but Rhem was nailed trying for third, out by at least six feet.

That was Wichita's last real chance. Koppe walked with two out in the ninth but Lee Maye, pinch hitting, bounded one back at Gabler and the pitcher made the out himself as Zeke Bella, trying for the ball, failed to cover.

GAME NOTES—Juan Pizarro will try to stem the Wichita second division pace tonight, in one game of the double bill. Don Nottebart who hurled seven shutouts in the Southern and had an 18-10 win-loss record at Atlanta will hurl the other one. Ben Flowers and Mark Freeman are nominated for Denver. — Tom Carroll, Denver's new shortstop came up with several nice plays and one real fine one, on Charles in the ninth. — Curt Roberts twice stole bases, once in the seventh when Ben Geraghty vigorously protested a pitch called a ball. Then when Gordon Windhorn, new Denver rightfielder was called out on strikes, Andy Cohen of Denver did an indignant war dance. On the whole, the game was free of rhubarbs or screwy plays such as the Friday thriller produced. It was a case of too much pitching, not enough hitting.
