The Denver Bears and Wichita Braves, balked by wet grounds Wednesday will tear into each other in a doubleheader baseball roustabout at Lawrence Field Thursday evening, with the first game at 6:30.

This will be the most important series of the season thus far, with second place at stake. Dick Nottebart, sharp, young righthander, will hurl the first one for Wichita, the 7-inning affair. Dave Jolly will work in the second one listed on regulation distance.

The Denver ball club arrived last night from Charleston where the Bears had a bad night of it. They were fogged in at the airport, they lost the series and part of the Denver club didn't play in the series at all.

Tonight Manager Andy Cohen probably will use Joe McClain (5-4) in the first game and might call on Lefty Ed Donnelly in the second.

The postponement of last night was the seventh of the season here and reduced the number of home openings to 60. This may or may not be a high mark for washed out games in league ball here but it is close to it, local officials believe.

Hurt the Gate

The game was sure to have drawn a big turnout, probably the largest mid-week crowd of the year and a doubleheader cannot be counted on to make up the difference as many fans make baseball plans some days ahead.

Manager Ben Geraghty didn't like the delay at all. "We were all set to go, I wanted to play," Boss Ben said as he helped answer a flood of calls at the Braves office early in the evening.

However, the heavy downpour which hit Wichita around 4:30 just put too much water on the field, and there was no signs of a clearing, although the sun did come out for a time.

Playing short for Denver will be Dick Sanders, former North High and W.U. all-around athlete, who left a quarterback starting post at W.U. to sign with the Yankee chain. "Sanders has been a life saver for us," said Manager Andy Cohen. The Wichita product started at third, has played the outfield and when Fritz Brickell suffered a broken leg bone on July 25, to be out for the season, Sanders stepped in and has played sharp ball in the field and is hitting timely.

Bella on Bench

"Denver also will be without Zeke Bella, first base veteran, in this series," Denver scribe Frank Haraway stated last night. He has a bad foot. Gordon Windhorn, star leftfielder, was out of action at Charleston but will be ready to play here.

John Gabler, Denver's ace pitcher with a 17-3 mark, will probably not pitch here. He has a sore muscle, received in batting practice, the Bears report.

Mark Freeman may hurl the third game for Denver, if he isn't in there tonight for a starting or relief chore in the second game.

Ben Geraghty stated last night that Vic Rehm will positively pitch the third game tomorrow night. "Rehm has looked very good his last two starts," the Braves boss states it.

Minneapolis helped to tighten the Association race in defeating Charleston in the series opener at Minneapolis. Charleston's lead was cut to three games by virtue of the defeat.

Wichita trails by 4½ games.
