

It will be three days of hard work for the 25 pitchers and catchers at the Indianapolis training camp here.

Andy Cohen, Indian manager, started to bear down today to get his pitchers in shape for an invasion of hitters Sunday.

Cohen, unlike many managers, wants the pitchers ahead of the hitters—in early practice.

"It's best for hitters when they start swinging against good stuff right away," Cohen said.

The Indianapolis batterymen reported Monday for first day work.

After wind sprints and limbering exercises, the players started individual pitching drills.

Top Shape Expected

Cohen expects his hurlers to be in top shape Sunday when the rest of his team starts training.

Indianapolis' veteran hurling staff has yet to report. Several big pitchers are working with the White Sox in Tampa. Others will see first action with the rest of the club Sunday.

First Indianapolis exhibition game is March 25 against Buffalo at Dowdy field.

A small crowd of two dozen well-tanned winter visitors were out to see Indianapolis work its first drills Tuesday.

The players out Tuesday, mostly youngsters, were hit with a mild set of training rules by Cohen.

Lights Out

Players must be in their rooms by midnight with lights out, must report for roll call at 10 a.m. daily and noon Sunday at Dowdy field, and must walk the few blocks from the Midtown motel to the field.

No poker or blackjack is permitted and the baseball players are not allowed to swim. Cohen warned the pitchers about losing money at South Florida's many mutuel plants.

Indianapolis will hold daily workouts, free to the public, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. until Sunday.
