

Phils Drill Set Today At Noon

(Times Bureau)

CLEARWATER — The Philadelphia Phillies work out at noon today in Jack Russell Stadium as pitchers and catchers continue to get ready for the rest of the squad, due to report Tuesday.

There were more conditioning drills yesterday as the players moved back to the stadium after a day at Athletic Field on Friday while the big diamond dried out. Yesterday they were able to use the regular mound and infield for the first time since spring training opened.

The batterymen split up for a modified game that had them running to second, third and home for runs. Pitcher Henry Mason, who chalked up a 12-3 record working mostly in relief for International League champ Buffalo last season, had the distinction of belting the first spring "home run." Mason cleared the left-center wall with a drive off Coach Andy Cohen.

Batting Coach Paul Waner, one of the best hitters in baseball history, worked with players in the batting cage as an automatic pitcher fired balls plateward.

Monday the Phils go back to a 10 a.m. starting time for practice.
