

'IT JUST SUITS ME FINE'

Cohen Ready for Challenge Facing Him as Tribe Pilot

By LESTER KOELLING

Andy Cohen is a man of many words and they come out quick and fast.

But they also can be emphatic, sincere and convincing. Like when the new manager of the Indianapolis Indians, who is in town for a press conference, said:

"I am well aware of what happened here last year and the challenge facing me. I'm only glad that I was the one chosen for the job. It just suits me fine. Right now I'm very happy about the whole thing and certainly glad to be back in the American Association working under Donie."

Donie, to Cohen, is Ownie Bush, president of the Indianapolis club, who was manager of the Minneapolis Millers in all but one of Cohen's eight playing years with that club. It was Bush who greeted Cohen when he arrived here last night, the two later going into a huddle on the Tribe's prospects for 1957.

"I can't evaluate our club at this time," said Cohen, "because I am not too familiar with the material which will be at my command or the strength of the other clubs in the league. A lot also will depend on the help we receive from the White Sox. But there's one thing in our favor, and that's the opening-day cut-down date for the majors. We should have our club pretty well set for the first game of the season."

Cohen is not a format manager. He prefers to play a diversified game by applying the players to the system.

"I guess you would call me a 'diversified' manager," said Andy. "We will do the best we can with the material at our command and we will play according to the type of players that we have. By that I mean if we have a fast club, we will play a running game; if we have fellows with power, we will go for the long ball and that big inning, and if we have good field and pitching and no hit, we'll play for that one run. We may even do all three."

With Indianapolis, Cohen is taking his first managerial step in Triple A, but he is not a novice at managing. He directed the New Orleans club in the Southern Association the last two years and preceding that tenure was a four-year term manager of Denver, then in the Class A Western League. He also managed clubs in the lower minors dating back to 1939.

The new Indianapolis manager expects to be on hand for the opening of the White Sox training season at Tampa, March 1, and spend several days with Manager Al Lopez before going to Hollywood, Fla., to greet Tribe players on March 11.

"I am well acquainted with Lopez," said Cohen, "and we should get along fine. I am deeply grateful and flattered that the White Sox organization thought well enough of me to ask me into their organization. And I say again, that right now I am very, very happy to be associated with Donie in Indianapolis."

DODGERS INVITE JAPS TO CAMP

BROOKLYN (AP)—Two Tokyo Giants players, their manager and a director of the club have accepted an invitation to spend a month at Brooklyn's training camp in Vero Beach, Fla., the Dodgers announced today.

Dodger President Walter O'Malley said this was a reciprocation for the goodwill gestures proffered to the National League champions during their tour of Japan last fall.
