HOLDOUT PAIR TROUBLES TRIBE

HOLLYWOOD, Fla.—There's a growing fear here in the spring training camp of the Indianapolis Indians that the club will have to do without two veterans from whom large things were expected.

Neither Jim Delsing nor George Spencer have relented in their contract battles with the Indianapolis management and it doesn't appear likely that either will. Spencer, who has been asked to take a healthy salary cut on the basis of his record last year, has received permission from the club to "trade himself" to another club provided that Indianapolis will receive equal value in return.

Thus far Spencer has been unsuccessful and he has two more days in which to peddle his services. After that he will have a choice of accepting Indianapolis terms or being placed on the suspended list.

The case of Delsing seems even more hopeless. Delsing was living on a major league salary last year and that, of necessity, was severely pruned to minor league proportions by the Indianapolis management.

"The salary he's asking is unheard of in minor league ball," said General Manager Ray Johnston. "It would stun you if I could reveal the figure he's asking. Neither our club nor any other minor league club could afford that kind of money."

More tears are being shed over Delsing's obstinacy than over that of Spencer, who actually gave the Indians only one good month last year. Of course, that came when it counted most, the last month of the season.

The Indianapolis club house was the scene of a rare event yesterday—a coach getting a rub-down. It was even more rare in that the "patient" was Coach Johnny Hutchings, who says he hasn't had his arm touched by a trainer in years. Hutch developed soreness in the forearm from pitching batting practice.

The irony of a swimming pool as one of the facilities of Midtown Motel, where the Indianapolis players are quartered, is that one of Manager Andy Cohen's training rules bans swimming as a recreation for players.

"Too dangerous," says Andy. "They might get a severe case of sunburn and besides, you use a different set of muscles in swimming than you do in baseball."

But the players are making good use of shuffleboard courts provided by the motel (which actually is a hotel) and the TV lounge. No card games are permitted in players rooms, and poker and blackjack are banned all the time at any place. Camp curfew is midnight when all lights must be out and all players in.

Wayne Martin and Jack Taylor, the two Marion County boys who have been working out with the Indians, left for home last night. Martin, a former Lawrence Central High School athlete, went home 27 pounds lighter.

"And I've lost only 10 pounds," moaned Hutchings.

Al Papai, who pitched for Jack Cassini at Memphis last year before the latter was ousted as manager of the Chicks, reports that the former Indianapolis second baseman is now managing a bowling establishment in Memphis.

Intermittent showers and hailstones shortened the Tribe's workout yesterday and also prevented the "B team" game with the University of Miami.
