A PITCHER IS BORN OF INJURY
HOLLYWOOD, FLA.—An injury to his left arm while playing first base may have opened the gates to a new career in baseball for Hal Trosky, son of the former Cleveland slugger.

Trosky is listed on the present Indianapolis roster as a pitcher, a position to which he was converted last year. In his first year on the mound, Hal won 9 and lost 5 at Duluth-Superior in the Class C Northern League.

"I was reaching for a wide throw at first base when the runner charged into my left arm and bent it backwards," explains Trosky. The injury not only affected his first-basing, but also his hitting and it appeared that his baseball career was ended.

Coming to the rescue, however, was Jack Sheehan, assistant farm director of the Chicago White Sox, who asked Trosky whether he ever gave a thought to pitching.

"I hadn't," added Hal, "but I was determined to try. I'm only thankful now that someone saw other possibilities in me and gave me the opportunity to continue my career in baseball."

Trosky was the second of three hurlers in the Tribe's 2-1 victory over Buffalo yesterday, and his own error, on a thrown ball, after giving up two walks, led to Buffalo's only run.

A blistered finger has been bothering Hal and his wildness yesterday was due to his inability "to feel the ball." The finger has been heavily coated with medication, leaving a numbness.

Trosky, a side-arming right-hander, may not make the Indianapolis club this year mainly because of lack of pitching experience, but it's a good name to remember in future years.

IT ISN'T often that a youngster rises from a lower classification league into major league or Triple A company, but a strong candidate for such an advancement is Ed Szyzewski, a recent Chicago high school graduate.

Ed is a 20-year-old pitcher listed on the Davenport roster of the Chisox system. In his first season of pro ball last year, he won 12 and lost 7 with Duluth-Superior and was the leading ERA hurler in the Northern League with a 2.19 mark.

He has been so impressive down here that Manager Andy Cohen decided to give him a shot with the Indianapolis club. Cohen deliberately picked the toughest spot for the youngster, sending him into yesterday's game with the score tied at 1-all in the seventh inning.

"Not only did Ed hold the Bisons scoreless and hitless while fanning four, he also drove in the winning run with a sharp single to center.

"I wanted to see what the kid could do under pressure," explained Cohen. "Well, he showed me. That boy has plenty of poise and a 'cruel heart on the mound.' If he continues to show that well, he just might make the trip North with us."

Szyzewski showed a mean fast ball and a cute change of pace that had the veteran Buffalo hitters off-balance and guessing. His performance yesterday apparently was no flash in the pan, because last year he fanned 179 batters in 177 innings and walked only 78.

"I like his mannerisms very much," said Cohen. "He seems to know what it's all about and he isn't scared to throw the ball. A kid like that has a great chance and I wouldn't hesitate to start the season with him, providing, of course, he continues to show me the stuff and heart he did today.

"That's the beauty of a centralized camp like this," continued Andy. "You get a chance to see all the fellows in action and once in a while you may come up with a prize prospect like Ed."

Ed throws as hard or harder than anyone in camp, at least of those on the Indianapolis roster.

GENERAL MANAGER Ray Johnston reports that George Spencer was expected here today to talk over terms with the Indianapolis management. Spencer is holding out because of a cut in his salary, but the fact that he was to come here on his own would indicate that he is ready to compromise with club officials.

Gooch Rolls 706

The week's second 700 series was bowled last night when William Gooch rolled a 221-217-268—706 for Sunset Subway at the Fun Bowl. Doug Johnson had hit a 707 series Monday.

Lois Glass topped the women keglers last night with a 637 at the Speedway lanes on games of 212, 246 and 179.
