ARNIE'S LONG, LONG TRAILER

HOLLYWOOD, FLA.—Housing will never be much of a problem for Arnie Atkins, no matter where the baseball trail takes the curve-ball pitcher owned by the Indianapolis Indians.

All he needs is a place to park his house trailer, but it will have to be a big one. The trailer is Arnie's home whenever he's not living in his more permanent house in Muscatine, Ia., and it's a two-bedroom affair with shower bath, built-in TV, air conditioning and a built-in refrigerator.

"It cost me $5,180," says Arnie, "but it beats looking for a place to live and the high cost of renting a furnished home."

The Atkins family contains two children in addition to Mrs. Atkins. They are at home in Muscatine, waiting to be hauled in the trailer to Indianapolis.

IF THE BASEBALL fortunes should ever frown on Barry Latman, he will be ready for a lucrative business in stocks and bonds.

The 20-year-old Los Angeles lad who virtually won himself a job on the Indianapolis pitching staff by blanking Kansas City for five innings yesterday, is majoring in banking and finance at the University of Southern California.

"I plan to be a stockbroker," said Barry, "and I have two more years of banking and finance at USC. Trouble is, I only get to go one semester, so it may be four years before I get my degree."

Latman has progressed rapidly up the baseball ladder. In 1955, his first year, he won 18 and lost 5 at Waterloo. Last year at Memphis, his record was 14-14 with a 3.85 earned-run average, one of the better marks in the league. After only two years of pro ball, Latman is on the threshold of a triple-A job with Indianapolis.

The big right-hander yielded four hits to the A's B team, but he fanned seven batters before leaving the game with a scoreless deadlock after five innings.

Hoosier Glen Rosenbaum, perhaps the only player in baseball who signed "on the plow," was the winning pitcher again in the Tribe's 3-2 decision over the Athletics. But Rosie was tagged in the ninth, tying the score.

Johnny Mostil, supervisor of Chicago White Sox scouts, is the man who signed Rosenbaum, but "I had to yank him off the plow on his dad's farm at Union Mills, Ind., to get his signature." That was in 1954. The next year, at Dubuque, Rosie won 15 and lost 3. Last year at Waterloo, he was 15-5.

Like Latman, Rosie is 20 years old, and in their two years of pro ball the youngsters have racked up 62 victories against only 27 defeats. Rosenbaum doesn't recall how many games he won in high school, but he does know that in four years he lost only one game.

If not this year, Latman and Rosenbaum easily should make the Indianapolis varsity in 1958. But look for one, maybe both, to come north with the Tribe 10 days hence.

The rookie from Virginia, Joe Martin, known in camp as J.C., was a hero for an inning yesterday. The lanky first-sacker hit an inside-the-park homer with one on in the eighth to give the Indians a 2-0 lead. Then, after the A's tied the score, Ted Beard walked with the bases full to force over the winning run.

Martin has become a big favorite in the camp here. No one works or tries harder and Tribe President Ownie Bush aptly described the youngster when he said: "He does everything the hard way, but he gets the job done. He won't let up a minute. He's in there battling and fighting you all the way. The kid is going to be a great player if he keeps that up."

Martin, a left-handed batter, swishes a wicked bat and he doesn't yield any ground to left-handed pitching. He stayed right in there against Alex Kellner of the A's yesterday and tagged the veteran for a single in one of two trips against the southpaw.

Dan Prohovich has shown a decided weakness against left-handed pitching and Manager Andy Cohen had the young shortstop in the batting cage at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, swinging at southpaw pitching provided by Rodolfo Arias. Veteran Al Papai is leaving the club in a few days to tie a marital knot with Claire Harrison in Memphis, Tenn. The wedding is set for Saturday and it will be the first for the 38-year-old hurler.

Manager Cohen's ire was aroused for the first time yesterday when players repeatedly missed, or didn't look, for signs. Cohen has only four signs and they're not complicated. He only asks that base runners watch him after every pitch, and that they weren't doing yesterday.
