A two-week road trip is never relished by a ball club, but when things are going bad, it's even worse.

Such is the situation that confronts the Indianapolis Indians, who leave tonight for Minneapolis with a 2-6 record for the first week of the American Association schedule. Nothing is going right for the Indians but their manager, Andy Cohen, is not dismayed nor are the players discouraged.

"We'll just have to hang in there," said one of the veterans, "and sooner or later we'll get straightened around. We're all new in the league, but once around and things will be different."

It has been the Tribe's misfortune to have been scheduled against the toughest clubs in the league during the opening week—and again during the next 10 days. All of the clubs that the Indians faced were and will be more or less "set" aggregations, needing no further testing of players or positions.

They were the clubs selected to make up the first division at season's end. The Indians just weren't, and aren't ready for that sort of competition. They're still in the experimental stage due to the tardiness in receiving several pitchers and other key players. Little else can be expected from such a transition that took all but two of last year's players.

It's true that the Indians have more potential than they've
