

Andy Cohen, former Eau Claire skipper who had more than his share of troubles in managing Indianapolis last summer, is a safe bet to be the new Colorado Springs skipper, succeeding Ira Hutchinson, who will be given another post in the White Sox organization.

Cohen is one of the better liked minor league managers in the business and one of the most talented of the skippers in the Chi-sox' chain.

Big Walker Cooper, the veteran catcher, now has Cohen's old job and best wishes at Indianapolis. Cooper is one of the bigger men physically among the 900 or so at this convention.
