Eddie Sawyer, the man who guided Philadelphia's "Whiz Kids" to a National League pennant in 1950, became the only major league manager to quit his job with the season one-game old.

Five Quiz Timers knew that Sawyer, who managed the Phillies from 1948-52 and returned in midseason 1958, quit after a 9-4 loss to Cincinnati on Opening Day in 1960.

The Quiz Timers are Richard L. Rexroad, 1312 Genesta Drive, Evansville; Johnny Evers, 1916 Southeast Blvd., Evansville; Fred Nichols, Madisonville, Ky.; Gary C. Threlkeld, Wheatcroft, Ky.; and Alan Dyer, Ft. Branch, Ind.

Sawyer was replaced by Andy Cohen, who served as acting manager for one game before the Phillies beckoned Gene Mauch from Minneapolis of the American Association. Mauch, who had managed Minneapolis to a Junior World Series title in 1958 and to a seven-game loss to Havana in 1959, managed the Phillies through 55 games of the 1968 season before he was replaced by Bob Skinner.
