

Miners Seek Coach

The University of Texas at El Paso announced plans to accept applications for the next two weeks before deciding on a replacement for baseball coach Andy Cohen who resigned this week.

Cohen recently completed his 17th season at UTEP.

"He has been with this baseball program since its inception." He gave of his talent and time for so many years. I think the world of him," said athletic director Jim Bowden. "We're forever grateful to him for his service here."

The university is now faced with having to hire a coach at a reasonable salary to replace Cohen who worked for virtually nothing.

"I don't know exactly what we're going to do," said Bowden about the open position. "We're thinking of having the baseball coach do something else, possibly having additional teaching assignments.

"Andy didn't teach classes. His assistant will certainly be scrutinized, as will every applicant."

Jeff Hogan, a member of Cohen's team from 1973-77, assisted Cohen during the '78 season as did Cohen's brother, Sid.
