

McFarlin Fills Spot

The University of Texas at El Paso named Larry McFarlin to succeed Andy Cohen as head baseball coach Friday. Cohen had served as coach since the university first fielded an inter-collegiate team in 1963 to earlier this summer when he resigned.

McFarlin, a former star player for the Miners, played pro ball for one year with the California Angels system before returning to El Paso to finish his degree and teach in 1968.

"I am elated on the selection of Larry as the new head coach," said Cohen, "In fact, I'm proud of the fact that one of my former players was chosen to succeed me."

In addition to his duties as coach, McFarlin will also aid the department in promotion and recruiting for all sports.
