

Distraction Hurt Marc At Arizona

TUCSON — When Andy Cohen's U.T. El Paso Miner baseball team met the University of Arizona Wildcats today in the final two games of the year here he hoped to have his pitchers do more concentrating.

His ace Marc Bombard suffered defeat when Arizona got to him in the first four innings for seven runs and a 7-4 win last night.

"Bombard was getting behind on his batters and not concentrating on what he was going to throw. Their pitcher, Rich Hinton, who hurt us the worst is a good example. Bombard had two strikes and no balls on him when Hinton hit a three-run triple.

HINTON ALSO added a homer to his list of runs batted in and hits for the day.

Cohen called on Larry Smith in the fourth to relieve Bombard. "Smith came in and pitched beautiful ball," Cohen said. "Even when I took him out, the Arizona fans applauded his performance."

"Smith threw a good fast ball and a tantalizing curve ball," he added.

COHEN LOST another one of his outfielders yesterday to leg injuries. The Miners, who have been plagued with injured outfielders all season now have centerfielder Bobby Morales out. Morales suffered a pulled hamstring muscle when he was running the bases.

Cohen said, "The difference in the game was their long ball hitting. Our boys played well and fought all the way, but Arizona bats were too strong."

John Miller was the big bat for the Miners with two singles and a triple. Danny Blanco added to the cause with two RBI's.
