

CSU Wins Nightcap

Miners, Rams Split Pair

 Very seldom will one see a designated hitter switch roles to a pitcher but Roy Stringer had no difficulty performing the task.
 As the University of Texas at El Paso Miners found themselves in serious trouble due to a Colorado State University uproar in the fifth inning, Coach Andy Cohen sent Stringer to the mound with one run already in and the bases jammed with twoouts.
 Unfortunately, he allowed CSU's Lee Lorimer to line a single to left field scoring the go-ahead run in the first game but that was all the light Colorado State saw.
 The Miners tied the game in the sixth and two innings later, with the bases loaded and no outs, Stringer, still batting in the DH position, scooted a single to center as U.T. El Paso, took the opener 3-2.
 Matters worsened in the nightcap as Coach Irv Ferguson's Rams exploded for eight fifth inning runs on their way to an 11-6 triumph and a split over the Miners at Dudley Field.
 Although CSU is a representative of the Western Athletic Conference as is U.T. El Paso, the two games are not a part of the WAC records because CSU plays in the Northern Division while the Miners are one of the four Southern Division members.

 "Stringer did a heck of a job for us," commented his coach. "He stopped their batters real well and then knocked in that winning run for us."
 The winning really for the Miners began with a single from leadoffhitter Art Bravo. Bob Alsop walked and Glenn Villarreal, who finished the doubleheader with four hits during seven official times at bat, reached first on an error by shortstop Galen Kitamura to load the sacks.
 On a no ball, two strike count, Stringer hopped the ball over second base and Bravo danced home with the victory.
 CSU quickly established its pattern in the second contest with a three-run spurt in the initial frame, highlighted by back-to-back singles off the bats of Lee Lorimer, Tom Rosamund and Brad Stevens.

 Three consecutive singles from Bravo, Alsop and Villarreal brought the miners one run closer in the third but the roof quickly fell on Cohen's Miners.
 Sending 11 men to the plate in the fifth, Colorado State went through three pitchers before three outs were recorded on defense by U.T. El Paso and by the time all the smoke had cleared, CSU held a comfortable 11-1 advantage.
 "This is the first time all year that our pitchers didn't do a good job," remarked Cohen following the split which left the Miners with an 11-7 record. "We just didn't have anybody that could stop them."
 The Miners did show some offensive power in the latter innings as Joey Pennies ripped a three-run homer over the right field fence in the fifth and Terry Dillingham socked a two-run single in the seventh, but time ran out for the Miners.
 CSU and the Miners engage in another single game at 1 p.m. Tuesday at Dudley Field with Sam Cox going on the mound for Cohen.

HARD TO HANDLE—Colorado State's Kit Amura found the deliver of University of Texas at El Paso pitcher Bob Knox hard to solve Monday. Amura popped up to first on this pitch during the Miners' 3-2 eight-inning win over the Rams before CSU bounced back to take the second game 11-6. —(Times Photo By Jerry Littman)

Palmer Discovers Winning Can Be Elusive Objective

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Victory for Arnold Palmer remains as intangible as a half-forgotten dream. It comes so close then disappears.
 "I feel like a cripple," he said, slumped in a chair. "I'm very frustrated. Right now, I'm very, very discouraged."
 It has been more than two years since he last won. But he has been very close.
 He could have won the 1973 Greater Hartford Open. At one point in the last round, he led the 1973 U.S. Open. He shared the lead at the halfway point of the 1974 national championship. He led with two holes to go in Hawaii early this year. He could have won the Jackie Gleason classic a month ago.
 He was in strong contention, occasionally leading, through three rounds of the Jacksonville Open last week and had a share of the lead as late as five holes in the last round.
 "But, with his large, still loyal, ever hopeful gallery agonizing with him, he bogeyed two in a row, later hit one out of bounds and quickly fell back. He shot 75 and tied for 17th in a tournament he could have won.

 Could have won but didn't. He could have added to his precious little horde of Ryder Cup points, and didn't. It was only another in a series of frustrations.
 "It was poor play, pure and simple," he said. "I just never put it all together. I felt like I was fighting an uphill battle. I knew if I didn't make a move someone else would."
 "I was trying to make something happen, and it just wouldn't happen."
 That, perhaps more than anything, may be his problem. It isn't his putting, or his chipping, or his irons or his driving. It's his desire.
 He wants it too much. This proud old champion, the most popular player the game has ever known, winner of 61 American titles, gets in position to win and starts pressing like a rookie.
 And he knows it.
 "I was pushing and pressing," he said of his last-round collapse in Jacksonville. "It might have been better if I was just lagging it up there and waiting for something to happen."
 But he didn't. He was going for it. He missed everything long. Nothing was short.
 "Instead of waiting, instead of letting it happen, I tried to force it," he said. "And I couldn't make it happen. I just couldn't force it to happen."
 Then he smiled. It was rather weak and wry and rueful, but it was a smile.
 "I guess all I can do is stay after it," he said. "I'm going to keep on trying for a while and see what happens."

Manager Billy Martin of the Texas Rangers made 33 hits in 28 World Series games over five years for a .333 Series batting average.

Upset Stomach Sidelines Sabre

BUFFALO (AP) — Goalie Roger Crozier of the Buffalo Sabres hockey team, who spent Sunday night in Buffalo General Hospital, apparently had "nothing more than an upset stomach," a spokesman for the National Hockey League team said today.

 He said Crozier, 33, was to be discharged before noon and would report to Memorial Auditorium for a team picture. He was not expected to skate in practice, the spokesman said.
 Crozier has suffered attacks of pancreatitis, an ailment of the pancreas. The spokesman said tests showed that was not his trouble this time.

 Crozier was in the goal Saturday night in Kansas City as the Sabres beat the Scouts 4-2 in an NHL game.
