

Jim Colbert, one up.

Ken Harrelson's funniest baseball story concerns a 16-hour eating and drinking spree with Frank Howard. It seems that Howard had cut down to 255 pounds, on orders from the late Gil Hodges, and lost his batting strength. So Hondo went on a tour of Pompano (Fla.) and regained 23 pounds in one night.

Pete Rose says that no matter what Bert Campaneris does in baseball, he'll always be known as the guy who threw his bat at the pitcher. "Fans in Cincinnati are still mad at me for getting a speeding ticket and running a red light one night," Rose said. "My picture was on the front page, in a tuxedo, and my father thought I had died."

Don't get too excited about Jack Billingham's future. The last pitcher to win a 1-0 World Series game was Wally Bunker.

It's no surprise that Phillies' owner Bob Carpenter, who was slow to integrate his team, did not offer the managerial job to Frank Robinson.

Here's Mike Epstein's all-time, all-Jewish baseball team: Epstein, 1b; Andy Cohen (1927 Giants), 2d; Sammy Bohne (1925 Reds), ss; Al Rosen (1954 Indians), 3b; Hank Greenberg (Tigers), lf; George Stone (1906 Braves), cf; Sid Gordon (Giants), rf; Johnny Kling (1908 Cubs), c; Sandy Koufax, Ken Holtzman, Jake Pitler (Dodgers) and Moe Berg (Red Sox), p.
