still have in my den at home. I have many fond memories of Newark and when I'm around I usually drop in to see Hoxie, who owns a clothing store. I remember him as the bat boy with the Bears."

Andy likes to tell the story of the days when he was running the El Paso club. It was at the time when Jorge Pasqual was making his big pitch to get American players to jump into the Mexican League.

"We had a club in Mexico City," Andy says. "Pasqual warned all the papers not to mention anything about our league, which was competing with his. One paper ignored the warning so Pasqual bought it and fired everybody on the staff.

"It has been a great, wonderful life and I wish I could do it all over again."
