ONE MAN'S OPINION

George Archie Deserves
Post as All-Star Coach

By RAYMOND JOHNSON

Dick Sisler will have his coach assisting him with the All-Stars tomorrow night when they play host Atlanta in the annual mid-summer classic.

The Vol skipper, who has the honor of handling the glamor guys because his Vols finished higher than any of the other managers still in the league except Atlanta's Buddy Bates, named George Archie as his assistant last week . . . But Dick didn't want any mention made of it until it was definite Atlanta would be the host city.

This will be the second time since the All-Star game was first played in 1938 that the pilot has gone outside the managerial ranks for his assistant . . . Cal Ermer, who bossed the stars here last summer, broke the ice when he named Al Sima, his Chattanooga coach.

Ermer Broke Precedent of Picking Coach Last Year

Until a year ago, it has been the policy of the manager to pick the one who had finished the highest the previous season . . . Ermer, pilot of the 1955 All-Star team against Birmingham, chose Clay Bryant, Mobile skipper . . . Bryant was new in the league that year but so were all the others, except Ermer.

George Archie

Jack Cassini picked Ernie White, Nashville manager, for the 1956 game . . . Ernie was new in the loop, but since Nashville had closed a series in Birmingham the previous night and New Orleans' Andy Cohen turned down the honor, White got it.

Not only will Sisler have Archie aiding him on the coaching lines, but he also will have Chuck Swope as his trainer . . . It has been the practice of the

All-Star skipper to use his own trainer for years.

Last summer when the All-Star game was in the Dell, Archie directed the players and executives through the pass gate . . . Tomorrow night he will be trying to get the stars around the base paths . . . It's quite a change but one well deserved.

Baron Writers Mad, Inaccurate, About Coles

Birmingham writers are burning because Chuck Coles was named the All-Star first baseman instead of their Lou Limmer . . . Benny Marshall (Birmingham News) writes: "Nashville's Chuck Coles, a sometimes first sacker, rode into the All-Star show on a Sulphur Dell-built batting average. In the Dell, Limmer might hit .350 and almost sure he'd whack 40 home runs. Because he plays 77 at Rickwood, he doesn't get there."

Now for Mr. Marshall's information, Coles has played all but 19 of his 92 games at first base, and in six of those 19 he served part time in the outfield and part time at first base . . . Seven of his 16 home runs have been away from the Dell, three of them coming in succession, and four altogether in the Birmingham park . . . He has hit almost as well on the road as here, which will surprise the Slagtown scribe . . . All it takes to be accurate is a little time to check the box scores.

No Wonder Griffith Wanted To Move Nats

Of course everyone knew money was the main thought behind Calvin Griffith wanting to move the Senators out of Washington and to Minneapolis . . . That's why Milwaukee got the Boston Braves, Baltimore the St. Louis Browns, Kansas City the Philadelphia Athletics, San Francisco the New York Giants, and Los Angeles the Brooklyn Dodgers . . . Minneapolis backers, disappointed that Horace Stoneham switched to the west coast from their town after they built a major league park, made Griffith a "hard to turn down offer" . . . They would guarantee one million attendance for three years at $1.50 per admission, or make up the difference, and 90 per cent of the concessions . . . No wonder he wanted to move.
