Special To THE EL PASO TIMES

LAS CRUCES, N.M. — Attempting to get back on the winning track, the University of Texas at El Paso Miners will meet New Mexico State in a baseball doubleheader here tonight.

The Miners own a 22-18 record after three straight losses to the University of New Mexico, but Coach Andy Cohen's crew is only four wins away from an all-time school record. The games at NMSU are the team's last games out of the Western Athletic Conference's Southern Division.

Following Tuesday's games, U.T. El Paso travels to Tempe for a three-game series with Arizona State Friday and Saturday.

Arizona leads the WAC-South with a 7-2 record, while ASU is 6-3. New Mexico is 3-6, while the Miners trail at 2-7, but with wins over both Arizona schools.
