

Over 500 Attend BPWC And Eagles Banquets

Encouraged by the success of the second annual Eagles baseball dinner, plans for the third annual event were being talked today with some new features.

More than 500 men and women baseball fans attended the noon luncheon sponsored by Business and Professional Women's Club at the Elks Club and the evening stag dinner at the Fargo Eagles Home.

A surprising turnout of 138 women at the noon luncheon and 375 men at the evening dinner boosted the day's total to 513, evidence that baseball fans, at least, favor such an annual event.

Two of the principals, Tommy Thomas, general manager of the Minneapolis Millers, and Pete Bradbury of Aberdeen, president of the Northern League, sent regrets for their absences, due to illness.

Manny Marget of Moorhead radio station KVOX presided at the noon luncheon. He was introduced by Fan Magoffin, former state president of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

Bessie Cummings, chaplain of the Fargo BPWC, led the invocation.

An early speaker was Bill Weaver of WDAY-TV. He was followed by J. G. Halbeisen, president of the Fargo-Moorhead Twins of the Northern League; Ken Silvestri, new F-M manager; Eugene Fitzgerald, sports editor of The Fargo Forum-Moorhead Daily News; Joe Boyle of KXJB-TV; Andy Cohen, new manager of the Denver Bears of the American Assn.; John Blanchard, Yankee rookie catcher; Joe McDermott of Sioux City, Yankee scout, and Ken Blackman, general manager of the wins.

Introduced were Bobby Ball, president of the new, Bismarck franchise in the Northern League, and Bill Hockenbury, former manager of the Bismarck Barons of the Man-Dak League.

Halsey Hall, Minneapolis sports writer, who was master of ceremonies for the evening dinner for the second year in succession, also spoke briefly at the BPWC luncheon, having arrived too late for a longer appearance.

Also introduced at the luncheon following their arrival with Hall were Frank Fahey, Milwaukee Braves scout; Tom Briere, Minneapolis sports writer, and George Brophy, Minneapolis Millers business manager.

All of those on the luncheon program with the exception of Miss Magoffin were at the evening dinner.

In addition, George Carver of Wyndmere, president of the Assn. of North Dakota Amateur Baseball Leagues; Steve Gorman, representing the intercollegiate league which bears his name, and Jack Williams, North Dakota Department adjutant, who was present when American Legion junior baseball was founded, represented their branches of competition.

Msgr. L. J. Arrell said grace.

A brief social hour preceded the evening dinner.

Brooks Baukol, president of the Grand Forks Chiefs, represented his club.

Hugo Weyrens, president of the St. Cloud Rox, and Frank Farrington of the St. Cloud Daily Times, were other Northern League visitors.

Reuben Tellinghusen, secretary-treasurer of the Bismarck-Mandan team of the Northern League, and Glenn VanTine, former president of the Man-Dak League, were in attendance from Bismarck.

Bob Kyburz, president, and Elmer Knudson, board member, represented Aberdeen.

Mrs. Virginia Olson played organ music during the dinner.

Weaver introduced Hall as master of ceremonies for the evening dinner.

Peter MacArthur was general chairman of the dinner.
