NBA Teams May Eclipse All Records

By RICH FULLERTON JR.

NEW YORK (AP)—If they keep up their present rate, National Basketball Assn. teams and players are likely to wipe out the league's old high scoring records of the 1940s and 1950s.

The pre statistics present a sharp contrast to those just compiled by the National Basketball Assn. A Service Bureau, which shows college scoring for this season at its lowest in several years.

Up through Tuesday's games, every team in the NBA was averaging more than 100 points a game, the league as a whole scored an average of 104.6 points a game for both teams—77.2 for each team.

And the New York Knicks, who were leading the league in scoring, had hit over 100 points in 36 consecutive games—three times the record of the Boston Celtics last season.

How do you explain all this? "Simply, the players are getting more proficient," says NBA President Maurice Podoloff. "Then I think there has been a slight shift in the way the game is played."

Whatever the reason, five of the 10 teams are averaging more than 100 points a game. The New York Knicks are leading the league with 104.6 points a game.

NBA records show a steady increase in scoring since the league was organized in 1946. Last season the teams averaged 98.6 points a game, but only four went over the 100 point mark.

One factor in the scoring increase may be that NBA teams are playing more games. The season is longer, and the teams are playing more games.
