

Keeping In LINE— Jersey Joe Walcott Named To Referee Here Next Week

By EUGENE FITZGERALD

My secretary reports:

Jersey Joe Walcott, the oldest man to win the heavyweight boxing championship, is going to referee the March 12 show sponsored by the Fargo Wrestling Club.

Walcott is being brought here to work the two-falls out-of-three bout between Hard Boiled Haggerty and Thor Hagen. Hagen won over Haggerty in an earlier bout, and I presume this is the "rematch". I'll bet 10 to 1, as they say in the bookie circles, that Walcott punches Haggerty.

Les Luymes, NDAC athletic director, is a candidate for the athletic directorship at Iowa State College in Ames.

I guess you know now that selection of Jimmy Adlam as manager of the Grand Forks Chiefs completes the Northern League managerial ranks for the earliest period in recent years.

George Rulon, formerly with the state department of the North Dakota American Legion office in Fargo, visited here recently and left a couple of notes. I'm passing them on to you.

George, now with American Legion national headquarters in Indianapolis, says fans in that city are glad Andy Cohen is going to be in the American Assn. this season. Andy, who was at the Fargo Eagles baseball dinner here last month, managed at Indianapolis last season, where fans are satisfied he missed because of poor talent furnished by the Chicago White Sox system.

George was in Albany, Ga., recently and met Al Meredith, who played the first 10 games in the Duluth infield in 1948, the year the Dukes had their fatal bus crash. He broke a leg in a game at St. Cloud and was released. He figures he might have been in the crash had he not broken his leg.

You've had more than a little correspondence on the hockey situation as it exists in Grand Forks and Fargo-Moorhead. I believe you should do something with this material.

Clark Swisher, athletic director and basketball coach at Aberdeen Northern, is considering an offer to become football coach and athletic director at Central Missouri in Warrensburg, where Dr. Warren Lovinger, former Aberdeen Northern president, now is the school head. Swisher, a former SDU athlete, has been at Aberdeen since 1946.
