

Barnstorming In Sports

By JOHN BOWMAN

This Barnstormer cannot understand why everyone is down on the champion Indianapolis Indians. The best pre-season rating that they received was a fifth place berth. The majority of the experts see the Indians in seventh place. Well, the Barnstormer will try his hand at this baseball predicting game here and now.

We will start with the American Association, where we find the underrated Indians in the first division according to our pick.

1. Denver.
2. St. Paul.
3. Minneapolis.
4. Indianapolis.
5. Omaha.
6. Wichita.
7. Louisville
8. Charleston.

You just cannot overlook such outstanding performers as: Ron Jackson, former White Sox first sacker; Jim Delsing, of short-lived, but well remembered, Detroit Tigers fame; Joe Valdivielso, former Washington Senator short stop; Ted Beard, Naptown Indian veteran; and Al Papai, Memphis 20-game winner. Add such renowned and able pilots as Andy Cohen and Johnny Hutchings, plus fine backing, and a team is bound to finish up in that first division.
