

New Faces Due for Tribe Home Finale

By LESTER KOELLING

The Indianapolis Indians will close their current home stand tonight, hopeful that the two newest player additions will be present for the finale.

As the major leagues reached the cutdown deadline last night, the Indians received Outfielder Neil Chrisley on option from Washington and sent Outfielder Dick DiTusa to Chattanooga. Previously, the Tribe was given Pitcher Jim McDonauld by the Chicago White Sox.

Chrisley

But the Indians failed to receive anyone from Cleveland which, it is understood, owes Indianapolis a player or two as part of the termination of last year's working agreement. Cleveland, instead, sent Bill Harrell and Preston Ward to San Diego, and sold Bob Usher to Washington to get within the 25-man player limit.

Other American Association clubs fared equally or better to the Indians as their major league affiliates pruned rosters. League-leading Wichita, already loaded with talent, received Wes Covington, power-hitting outfielder, and Bob Trowbridge, an experienced hurler, from Milwaukee.

Minneapolis, needing pitching help, got Pete Burnside, a talented southpaw, from the New York Giants, and Omaha received Outfielder Jim King from the St. Louis Cards. Omaha, in turn, sent Outfielders Harry Keister and Al Baro to Houston and Infielder Ken Hilyer to Rochester. The New York Yankees optioned Woody Held, hard-hitting infielder, to Denver.

Other moves by major league clubs to get within the player limit included Washington's sale of Outfielder Dick Tettelbach and Pitcher Dick Brodowski to San Diego; Boston's optioning of Catcher Heywood Sullivan to Miami, and Cincinnati's release of Infielder Rocky Bridges.

All the variations of baseball were explored at Victory Field last night when the Indians slugged Charleston, 15-0, in the most decisive victory of the current American Association campaign. And just when the Indians needed pitching the least, they got the most.

Tony Ponce, hurling the Tribe's first shutout victory of the season, allowed the Senators only five hits and turned in the club's first full-route pitching performance in 17 games. Ponce also contributed generously to the Tribe's 16-hit attack with two doubles. He also scored two runs and batted in another.

Ted Beard, John Romano and Vince Garcia were the principal frolickers in the Tribe romp, the trio collecting nine hits and batting in 10 runs. Eleven walks from Charleston hurlers aided and abetted the Indians who reached the .500 level in the standings.

The Indians, leading the league in club batting with a .299 mark and in extra base hits with a total of 98, should become an even more formidable crew if Chrisley approaches the season he had last year with Louisville. As a member of the Colonels, the left-handed hitting outfielder batted .298, ranked fourth in the league in slugging with 276 total bases, cracked 24 homers and batted in 98 runs.

But Manager Andy Cohen

has not yet decided just when and where Chrisley will play.

"Where can I play him?" pleaded Cohen. "Our outfielders now are carrying the club and I can't take any of them out the way they're hitting." (Jim Delsing is hitting .365, Sam Mele .359 and Beard .339.)

Manager Cohen mulled the suggestion that he might platoon Mele and Chrisley, thus giving Mele some rest he might need later in the season.

"I might do that later when the hot summer months roll around," said Cohen, "but until either Mele or the other outfielders stop hitting, I think they'll start every game."

The addition of Chrisley gives the Indians their fourth left-handed batter, making for a good balance on offense. In sending DiTusa to Chattanooga, a Washington farm club, Tribe officials believe that the regular competition he will get there will develop the youngster faster than the probable infrequent appearances with Indianapolis.

Following tonight's finale with the Senators, the Indians will hit the road until May 28 when they return for a one-game stand with Louisville. The Tribe will visit Wichita, Omaha, Minneapolis and St. Paul on its second long trip in May.
