

Ted Beard No All-Star? Check Records, Please

By LESTER KOELLING

He's leading the league in total hits and runs scored, and he's third in batting with .348, yet there's a friendly little wager among the boys in the "back room" at Victory Field that Ted Beard will not be selected for the American Association All-Star team.

Beard's 11th-inning homer last night, giving the Indianapolis Indians a 10-9 comeback victory over Omaha, made him the main topic of conversation in the postgame observations. It was agreed that Little Mighty is the best defensive outfielder, especially in center field, in the American Association; that he could help some major league club; that he's the best base runner in the league and as fast as ever, and that his arm is just as good and deadly as it was in 1948.

Why not an All-Star cinch then? First of all, Beard is playing with a second-division club and although that shouldn't make any difference, unfortunately it does. Also, six of the seven leading batters in the A.A. are outfielders and three are on first-division clubs. Finally, Beard is not "copy." He's not a popoff nor a "character" who provides color yarns for the writers. He minds his own business in a quiet sort of way; rarely speaks unless spoken to; seldom argues with umpires and never "grandstands" in the field. He just lets his ability do the talking for him.

Voting for the All-Star game, to be played July 15, will start in about two weeks, and it will be interesting to note the results. If Beard isn't chosen for the team, it will be the greatest injustice ever perpetrated against an American Association player.

Beard's homer could not have won the game for the Indians last night had not several others contributed important bits. Sam Mele, for example, connected for a 400-foot plus homer over the left center wall to tie the score at 9-all in the ninth.

"That was the most dramatic hit of the game," said Manager Andy Cohen without taking anything away from Beard's game-winning. "That was perhaps the hardest and longest ball Mele ever hit."

Earlier, John Romano brought the Indians to within one run of the Cards with a homer in the seventh, and back in the third inning, Ron Jackson lined a drive over left for his eighth homer of the year and 43d run-batted-in.

"But don't forget to say something about Bill DuFour," reminded Manager Cohen. "That little guy hung in there great."

DuFour, the fourth Indianapolis pitcher, worked the last three innings and gave up only one hit. He walked two and fanned two and was the first to greet Beard at the plate on the game-winning homer. DuFour, showing great competitive spirit and looking faster than ever, richly deserved the praise accorded him by Manager Cohen.

Barry Latman should have won this game in regulation time, but he failed to survive prosperity. He yielded a three-run homer to Don Lassetter in the third, a homer that gave the Omaha outfielder a tie for the A.A. lead, and then after the Indians "popped" for four runs in the sixth for a 7-3 lead, Latman gave up another three-run homer, this one to Rance Pless.

The most damage, however, came after that. George Spencer, relieving the youngster, was tagged for a triple by Milt Smith. That brought in Tom Flanigan who experienced all sorts of bad luck when Dick Brown's 8-foot single sent over the tying run and the Tribe defense collapsed to allow two more runs to score.

The Omaha series will wind up tonight with Al Papai hurling for the Indians and the game sponsored by the Indianapolis Passenger Association. The red-hot Charleston Senators, winners of five straight, move in tomorrow for a four-game series.
