

Rainstorm Is a Blessing to Our Crippled Indians

DENVER—Rain, which seems to be given out in overgenerous amounts and occasions this season, never was more welcome to the Indianapolis Indians than last night in Omaha.

That it washed out the final game of a series with the Cards didn't make anyone unhappy, particularly Manager

Andy Cohen, who just shakes his head when he looks over the lineup of cripples. Had there been a game last night, neither Charley Williams nor Jose Valdivielso would have been able to play because of injuries suffered in the Sunday night twin bill.

It's even doubtful whether either will be able to perform against the Bears tonight in the opener of a three-game series. Williams seems closer to returning to action, but he won't be in top shape for several days.

Shortly after the game was postponed last night, Manager Cohen called a club meeting in one of the hotel parlors.

"It was just a little pep session," explained Cohen. "I wanted to get a few things straight with the boys and tell them just how they stood with me."

It was obvious that Cohen was a bit upset over some unkind references in the Omaha paper to Sam Mele's slow handling of the game-winning hit in the second game Sunday night.

"I don't think and I don't want anyone else to think that Sam was loafing on that play" said Cohen. "We all know Sam's limitations. He's giving us the best he can."

"Everyone has been putting out to the best of his ability," continued Cohen. "I can't accuse anyone of not hustling or not giving his best. But ap-

The Indians won't win, either, until they abandon their nonchalance and get a little mad and daring.
