

ANDY HOPES SO

Maybe It'll Be Better in Omaha

OMAHA — The Indianapolis Indians have seen the last of the Denver Bears for the 1957 season and that ought to be very much all right with the Tribe.

The Bears won 17 of the 22 games and the crowning blow came last night in the second game of a double-header when they erased a 6-0 deficit in the last three innings to win, 7-6.

In Indianapolis lost all of its home games against Denver except for sweeping a July 7 double-header. The Indians did a little better in Denver, winning three games—all of them in early season.

The Bears finished off with an unbroken run of 10 straight victories over Manager Andy Cohen's men.

"They just couldn't do anything wrong against us and we couldn't do anything right," Andy explained. "It seemed that we made an uncommonly large number of mental errors against Denver and they have the kind of ball club that takes full advantage of any lapses."

Andy conceded that the Indians notched a respectable number of hits against the Bears "but we didn't get 'em when we needed them. Our pitchers for some reason made more bad pitches against the Bears than against any other club, too."

The rotund Indianapolis pilot was particularly peeved over the fact that so many key Denver hits in the late-inning comeback rallies of last night's second game came on counts of two strikes and no balls.

"One of the pitchers said to me, 'Andy, you don't think I was trying to throw the ball where I did, do you?" Now what are you going to say to a kid like that who's trying to do his best?

"In fairness to our front-line pitchers, I've got to say that I've had to put an extra heavy burden on fellows like (Barry) Latman, (Tom) Flanigan and (Roy) Tinney.

"They're tired and it shows.

"I've got to figure out some way to give them a little more rest, especially Flanigan. But it's hard to do when you've got problems like (Tony) Ponce's swollen ankle and the fact that Jim McDonald is the type of pitcher who needs four complete days off between starts."
