

Charleston Only Tribe Roadblock

Special to The News

MINNEAPOLIS—Indianapolis opens a three-game series in Charleston tonight—a long haul from this northern end of the American Association—but, thankfully, the last stop on a disastrous road trip.

When the Indians absorbed 7-0 and 7-3, their record for a double defeat at the hands of Minneapolis last night, the current journey stood at 3-12, and they must do some winning in Charleston or their hold on sixth place will be in jeopardy.

Barry Latman made a game attempt to salvage a split in the Minneapolis series in last night's second game. He started for the second time in as many days but a three-run homer by Foster Costleman ruined his effort.

So the Indians, who had been all even with the Millers here before the twin bill, wound up down 7-5 and 13-9 to the Minnesotans for the season.

Manager Andy Cohen was hardly his usual bubbling self as the Indians headed east, but he could see a few rays of hope.

"Ron Jackson's sore arm is better," Andy said. "X-rays show nothing is broken and I hope he'll be able to play before we leave Charleston. If not, he'll be ready for sure when we get home Friday night to play Wichita. At any rate we won't use the big guy until he's fit. Trying to play in St. Paul the other night was a mistake. It set him back several days."

The Indians go into Charleston leading the Senators, 10-9, and Jim McDonald (9-3) is set to pitch the opener. The Charleston stop will be something of a respite for the Tribe which faces five double-headers in five days at home—three with league-leading Wichita and two with Louisville.

Last night, the Indians ran into stout Minneapolis pitching and a revived Miller attack that banged out 24 hits in the two games while the Tribe was collecting but 10.

Jose Valdivielso's 11-game hitting streak was stopped in the opener and the Indians made only two earned runs all evening.

Max Surkont shut them out with four hits in the seven-inning first game to record his 13th victory of the season against five defeats. The veteran of 20 seasons of professional pitching seldom was in trouble and was aided by two double plays.
