

PAGE 8

THE INDIANAPOLIS

Wife, 3 Children Assure Indians' Manager Of Home Grown Baseball Rooting Section

By JEAN B. KAUFMAN

With pigtailed bouncing, 5-year-old (I'm almost 6) Cathy Cohen, announced to her daddy and mommy, "I've got to have some Scotch tape," and off she went scooting through the Claypool Hotel lobby to make her big purchase of the day.

About that time, little Henry (Hank) Cohen, 20 months old, came toddling up to the breakfast table saying "Mommy, Mommy" for no apparent reason other than he wanted his mother. He's sporting a big black eye this week thanks to a taxi driver who tried to get in the same spot with another car simultaneously.

FINALLY, THE MORE subdued of the three youngsters of the Indianapolis Indians new baseball manager, Marina, 8, appeared with a book in hand, scanning the pages intently as she walked through the coffee shop.

That's the family of Barbara and Andy Cohen whose roots are settled at Elmira, N.Y., but who have taken up temporary abode in far flung states from Wisconsin to Colorado, Louisiana and others.

HOOSIERLAND IS the latest stopping point and Mrs. Cohen and the youngsters will be here through this home stand of the team until the first part of the week. Then they'll travel back to Elmira until the end of the school year when they'll pack their bags again to head for a summer in Indianapolis.

Mrs. Cohen, a charming and personable person—as well as an efficient mother—is looking forward to this week end particularly. Sunday is hers and Andy's 12th wedding anniversary and it will be the first one they have ever spent together since they were married.

Naturally, she's hoping for a sweep of the twin bill Sunday afternoon with the Omaha team. One very important reason is that when the team Andy manages loses, words are few and far between in the Cohen household. He's given

The Indianapolis Indians new manager, Andy Cohen, enjoys breakfast with his entire family, a real treat considering his busy schedule of recent days. Seated with Andy and Mrs. Cohen are the three young Cohens (front to back) Henry, Cathy and Marina. (Star photo by Bill Oates)

a wide berth until morning, Mrs. Cohen says.

ALONG THIS SAME line of thought, Mrs. Cohen commented she once told her husband "You're a poor loser." He retaliated, "I'm not a poor loser, just a hard loser." "He just hates to lose a game, particularly a tough one," she added.

An avid baseball fan, Mrs. Cohen confided that sometimes she wishes her husband had followed a more normal career. "It would be nice to go to a game with him, sit with him and talk with him during the game."

Also in the occupational hazard line is the fact that necessarily Andy must spend much of his time away from home during the season and even when a game is rained out he usually is asked to appear before some group. "He never says no to requests if it's at all possible for him to comply."

All in all, the Cohens are a very normal, happy family.

As Manager Andy left his wife and his youngsters to begin his day's work, he gave her a kiss on the cheek saying, "I'll call you when I get a chance, honey."

POINTS FOR PARENTS

By EDYTH THOMAS WALLACE

Mother: "Half an hour a day is little enough for you to practice. You will be glad some day that I stood over you and made you do it."

Mother: "Would you like to write down how long you practice each day—and divide it as you wish, just so the total is at least three hours a week."

Teen-agers accept a requirement more willingly if they can be allowed to make their own decisions as to the way in which it will be met.

with both traditional and modern furniture.

In ultramodern displays, table lamps 4 or 5 feet high were set in pairs at both sides

Floor And Table Lamps Stylish For Bedrooms

Chicago (INS.) — If you've bought new lamps for the living room, don't give away the old ones. Put them in bedrooms.

Both tables and flood lamps made a surprise appearance in swank bedroom settings at a recent home show at Chicago.

Instead of dainty-sized lamps for night tables and bedroom chests, decorators used the same tall, decorative models that are stylish for living areas.

The new room use for such lighting fixtures was featured

Mrs. Snyder's Easter Candies

Decorated Choc. Eggs
Candy Novelties
Filled Baskets

... and our regular large assortment of chocolates.

BYRON'S

922 Broad Ripple Ave.
CL 1-1330