

Baseball's Proving Ground

LIKE THE new models that hit the highways every year, the many ball clubs around the country must first undergo performance tests . . . carefully supervised "proving ground" checks . . . before they make their public appearance. The home-owned Indianapolis Indians, are now back, full-swung, into their 1957 season, tanned and conditioned by the searing Florida sunshine. This year, training with the Chicago White Sox farm teams in Hollywood, Fla., the players lived in comparative luxury at a resort motel, strolling the several blocks to the ball park. The daily workout? As usual it was tough on the winter-pampered muscles of the players. ★ ★ ★

PHOTO FEATURE BY TOMMY WADELTON

Johnny Hutchings, former Indians pitcher, is coach, one of hardest workers on field.

Manager Andy Cohen supervises training, evaluating the players to pick the team.

Target practice! Automatic catcher is an innovation . . . mechanically returns ball.

The Indianapolis Star Magazine

APRIL 28, 1957