

Crippled Tribe Plays Senators

Hopeful that the two-day layoff will help solidify their riddled ranks, the Indianapolis Indians return to action at Victory Field tonight.

A doubleheader is booked with Charleston, the first game to begin at 6:30 o'clock. It will be Park Department Night.

Manager Andy Cohen yesterday said that Jim McDonald definitely will pitch one of the tilts. McDonald has a 4-1 record and has a three-game winning streak.

Cohen is looking for Pablo Bernard, infielder obtained from Havana, to take over at second base. Don Prohovich will not be able to return for infield duty for at least three weeks because of the foot injury suffered in Sunday's game with Minneapolis.

Outfielder Jim Delsing and Charlie Williams, another infielder, may be able to play tonight. Delsing's stomach ailment has been diagnosed as peptic ulcer while Williams suffered a slight concussion in a collision at second base Saturday night—also against Minneapolis.

Vince Garcia's status is doubtful—the infielder having sustained an ankle injury.
