

Tie Loses Appeal

DENVER (AP)—One of the prized neckties in the fabulous collection of Manager Andy Cohen of the Denver Bears baseball team has lost its appeal.

The $15 creation was given to Andy after his Bears, now in the American Assn., won the Western League pennant in 1954.

"It had baseball figures on it and I really prized that tie until one night when I met Del Webb (co-owner of the New York Yankees) in a Denver restaurant," says Cohen.

"Del had just arrived from New York and hadn't had time to freshen up. 'Look,' he said, 'I haven't shaved and I really look terrible. This tie is really sloppy.'

"He was wearing a tie identical to mine."
