

Indians' New Pilot Reports

INDIANAPOLIS (UP) — Andy Cohen, new manager of the champion Indianapolis Indians of the American Association, had his first look at Victory Field since the late 1930s Thursday and said he's going to like it here.

"I've spent many nappy hours here," he recalled. "I like Indianapolis."

"Yeah, don't forget we send all our managers up to the big leagues," said Tribe president Ownie Bush. Cohen was eight years with Minneapolis when Bush was manager.

"It seems that way," quipped Cohen. "Don't stop now."

Cohen and Bush agreed short-stop is their top problem this spring. Cohen indicated he was relying primarily on the Chicago White Sox, with whom Indianapolis has a working agreement, to fulfill the local needs.

Cohen said he would report to the White Sox camp late this month. The Indians open training at Hollywood, Fla., in the middle of March.

While Cohen got acquainted here, the Indians signed 265-pound ex-pitcher Johnny Hutchings to another contract as coach.
