CLEARWATER, Fla., Feb. 24.—Andy Cohen has a soft spot in his heart for Philadelphia. The new Phillies' coach made his major league debut there at old Baker Bowl.

"That's where I broke in,"

Wally Post OKs Pact With Phils

Special to The Inquirer

CLEARWATER, Fla., Feb. 24.—The list of unsigned Phillies was reduced to seven Wednesday when outfielder Wally Post agreed to terms after a brief conference with General Manager John Quinn.

With the pitchers and catchers due for their first official workout Thursday, three players will probably be listed as holdouts unless they come to terms quickly. They are pitchers Humberto Robinson, Taylor Phillips and Jim Owens. Four other unsigned players are not due until March 1.

Paul Waner, the Hall of Fame member, signed to instruct the Phils' batters, will concentrate on the pitchers' bunting technique for the next few days.

PHILLIE FODDER: First baseman Ed Bouchee and outfielder Harry Anderson checked in Wednesday to join other non-batterymen getting a head start. . . . Rain shortened unofficial activity Wednesday. Curt Simmons threw for 10 minutes, and Post had a session in the batting cage with the "Iron Mike" pitching machine.

Episcopal Loses

PRINCETON, Feb. 24.—Princeton's freshman squash team (6-2) dropped the first two matches, but defeated Episcopal Academy (4-2), 5-2, at Dillon Gym tonight.

Cohen said Wednesday as the Phils prepared to open spring training on Thursday. "I pinch-hit for a pretty good ball player, too — Frankie Frisch. But let's get it straight. Frisch had a bad leg and John McGraw wanted to rest him after we got a big lead."

Cohen, graying and a little paunchy, returning to the big leagues after 30 years, is still a great admirer of the late manager of the Giants, although he's not a professional old-timer who lives in the past.

LEARNED FROM McGRAW

"I came up to the Giants in 1926," Cohen recalled, "and I learned a lot of baseball under McGraw. The men who played for him either loved him or hated him, there was no middle. While some of his methods of handling men might not have worked today, I think he would have adjusted with the times."

"I subbed for a couple of good ball players on the Giants. First, it was Frisch and later on it was Rogers Hornsby. You remember why Frisch left the Giants after the 1926 season. I'll never forget that fuss he and McGraw had one day in St. Louis. I was sitting on the bench right next to McGraw."

"McGraw used to control the ball game. He had signs for everything. This day the Cards had men on first and third late in the game and McGraw gave the sign that if the man on first tried to steal the catcher was to throw the ball back to the pitcher and try to trap that man off third."

"Well, everybody got the sign except Frisch. Sure enough, the
