

Quick Career as Pilot For Coach Andy Cohen

Alvin Dark collected the 2000th hit of his big league career in the sixth inning. He beat out a grounder to short and continued to second when short-stop Johnny Logan threw wildly to first. Dark collected his first in 1946 as a member of the Boston Braves.

Opening - night ceremonies were held to a minimum. Mayor Richardson Dilworth threw out the first ball, the National Anthem was played and the game began.

Andy Cohen had an unusual debut and farewell as a big league manager. The Phillies coach said, "I've been waiting 30 years for a chance to manage in the majors. Now I'm hired and fired all in the same day."

Red Schoendienst's single in the second was his first since 1958. He went hitless in five trips last year when he was sidelined most of the season by his bout with tuberculosis.

It was even longer between major-league home runs for Bobby Del Greco. His last was in 1956 when he was with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Mel Roach, the converted infielder who played left field, robbed Joe Koppe of at least a double when he banged into the leftfield fence to grab a long fly at the start of the third inning.

Curt Simmons gave up as many home runs in the first inning as he did in his entire spring-training chores. He was tagged for a pair by Detroit's Steve Bilko in the one exhibition.

Don Cardwell's homer was his third in the majors. He hit his first off Pittsburgh's Bob Friend Aug. 31, 1957. His second came last Sept. 1 at Milwaukee off Bob Buhl. The Phils won both games.

Cardwell batted only .055 last season.
