

Phony Fine Stuns Cohen

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 16.—All day long the Phillies kidded first base coach Andy Cohen about his quick ejection in the final inning of Monday night's game with the Pirates.

Cohen took the "stay around a little while tonight, Andy" jibes in good grace, but the swarthy coach turned a little white when he got to the clubhouse Tuesday afternoon and found a wire in his locker notifying him that he had been fined $100 by the league president for Monday night's incident.

Andy quickly recovered when some of the Phils told him they had faked the wire. A first offender such as Cohen doesn't usually draw a fine.
