

Andy Cohen Waited 30 Years To Manage Major-League Team

Former Pilot In Pirate Farm System
Retired Undefeated After One Game

PHILADELPHIA, April 28—Many baseball men wait a lifetime and never get the call to manage in the majors. Andy Cohen waited 30 years for his big chance and when Eddie Sawyer suddenly quit the Phils, Cohen was in charge exactly one day. He maneuvered the Phils into a victory over the Braves, then retired undefeated to make room for Gene Mauch.

"Sure it was a thrill to handle a big-league team, even for one game," Cohen related. "Everybody who ever played the game, or ever managed, always has hopes of reaching the majors. I'm no different than any other person. It may never happen but we battle and we hope."

Cohen is no stranger to many of the Pirates who received their schooling from him in the farm system. For many years Cohen was the manager at New Orleans and later at Denver when the Pirates worked with that team.

Andy had Dick Stuart, Boh Skinner, Danny Kravitz and Fred Green under his wing and he also recommended the Pirates draft George Witt from the Dodger organization a few years ago.

Cohen was a star halfback at the University of Alabama before he went into baseball. The Giants bought him from Waco, Tex., for $25,000 in 1925, and he made his major-league debut against the Pirates at Forbes Field the next year.

Andy lasted six years in the majors, then started playing and managing in the minors, where he spent more than 30 years. Cohen watched the kids develop their talents on the way up; now he is looking at the finished product—if you can so classify the Phils.

Meyer Relieved With 3-2 Count On Batter

Mauch made a switch in pitchers at an unusual time last night when he relieved Jack Meyer with two out and the count 3-2 on Don Hoak in the fourth inning . . . "Meyer was coming out that inning anyhow and I was disgusted because he had two strikes and no balls on Hoak, then couldn't find the plate," Mauch explained. Many of the Pirates said they never had seen a change of pitchers on a 3-2 count.

SKINNER

Names mentioned in Pirate-Phil trade talk so far are: Philles Gene Conley and Don Cardwell and Pirates Danny Kravitz, Smoky Burgess, Hal Smith, Dick Schofield and Don Gross. But John Quinn of the Phils doubts if a deal can be made with the Bucs . . . The Tuesday night postponement will be played as part of a twi-nighter here July 8.

Jim Coker threw out three Pirates trying to steal (Skinner made it once)—two of them in the ninth inning . . . Bobby Del Greco leading the Phils in homers with his third one . . . Pirates had 12 homers in eight straight games but were blanked last night . . . Bucs have three of the six leading batters in the league in Skinner .390, Clemente .388 and Great .354 with Skinner topping the league with 15 RBIs.
