

Plain Dealing

They're Saying Hayes Won't Be Back at Ohio; Baer Thanks Late Manager

By GORDON COBBLEDICK

Plain Dealer Sports Editor

One thing and another: Surprising how many persons close to the Ohio State situation (including some of Woody Hayes' warmest boosters) are predicting that the outspoken coach won't be back next fall. . . . Lou Boudreau, Clarence (Pants) Rowland, Clark Griffith, A. G. Spalding and Frank Chance have joined Amos Alonzo Stagg, Bob Zuppke, Chick Evans and Joie Ray in the Illinois Sports Hall of Fame. Selections are made by the Illinois Associated Press Editors' Association.

GORDON COBBLEDICK

Max Baer: "I used to scream like an angle when Ancil Hoffman (his late manager) took my money away from me. After the Schmeling fight I got only $100. Ancil was putting my dough away in them policies. Now I'm set for life." . . . Tom Carney, St. Ignatius end, son of Jim Carney, secretary of the Cleveland fire department, has taken the exams for admission to the U.S. Military Academy. . . . The Cleveland Browns are high on Don Allard, sharpshooting Boston College quarterback. So are the Green Bay Packers.

In his comparatively brief career of 10 years as a jockey, Willie Shoemaker has set records other riders will be shooting at for years to come. Among his feats was the winning of four futurities in a season—and he is given a good chance to make it five in the Pimlico today . . . Andy Cohen, an infielder with John McGraw's Giants in the '20s after performing with the Cleveland Rosenblums, has called it quits following 36 years as a player, scout and manager—his last job at Denver. He'll become a beer distributor.

Los Angeles Dodgers have inaugurated a new price scale for kids—75 cents general admission. Remember when you used to mow lawns to get two bits to buy your way into old League Park? . . . Dave Hibbert of Arizona has all but locked up the collegiate pass-catching title with 54 . . . Detroit fans have beefed plenty about the fighting and rassing in the Lions-49ers game. Funny, but some people still prefer their football straight. . . . Red Sox infielder Billy Consolo, ex-Cleveland, has been sprung from the Army because of a kidney ailment.

John Bailey Faces Lifetime Ban

John Bailey, brother of the Barons' Bob, faces a lifetime suspension for punching his own coach, Johnny Horeck of the Chatham (Ont.) club. Bailey, once owned by the Barons, has been in and out of hot water throughout his career . . . Twenty years ago Billy Haughton was a groom earning $7 a week. This year his stable of harness horses may be the first ever to earn a million in a season. His biggest winner is Belle Acton. She has banked $153,374 so far . . . Sam Snead's golf swing was clocked at 81.1 miles per hour.

Forest Evashevski's trip to the Rose Bowl with his Iowa team will cost him money. Earlier this year he had agreed—at a handsome price—to help Tom Harmon broadcast the game . . . Massillon High's Tigers drew more than 90,000 paid admissions for their home season . . . Thought for the Washington Senators: Russia solved its soccer problem by firing the losing coach and replacing him with a five-man committee . . . The National Hockey League is 41 years old today.

New York's athletic commission forbids wrestling promoters to use the word "championship" in advertising or publicity . . . Los Angeles expects to have its 16,000-seat arena ready for a June opening . . . Middleweight Spider Webb's first name is Ellworth. And Yama Bahama, the welter, is really William H. Butler Jr. . . . Because of their higher ticket scale, the New York Giants will show the biggest profit in the National Football League this fall . . . Warren's Mike Lutz, a former Indian farm hand, is slugging the ball for San Juan in the Puerto Rican League.