

Cobb Is Just 'Aged Tourist' to Colavito; Cronin to Inspect West Coast Sites

Ernie Harwell, who broadcasts Tiger games, are interested in an oil well that began producing last month.

Dummy Hoy, oldest ex-major leaguer, now living in Cincinnati, will be 98 on May 23. . . . Andy Cohen, back in the big show after 30 years, played with Fred Brickell, a Pittsburgh infielder, a generation ago and more recently coached Fred's son, Fritz, of the Yankees. Cohen is remembered as the answer to John McGraw's search for a Jewish player when McGraw managed the New York Giants a long, long time ago. He never quite made it, however, and has been managing in the high minors most of the time since. Now he's back as a coach with the Phillies.
